

Stand out in salmon

Report in style

Natoora Impact Report: Onatoora

Natoora supplies meticulously sourced seasonal produce to some of London's most renowned restaurants. Their annual Impact Report, printed as a traditional mini newspaper, educates readers about the work they're doing to "replace a broken, opaque food system with a transparent and sustainable supply chain." Beautiful imagery from the farms they work with makes Natoora's mission all the more vivid.

Luxurious lookbooks

Design: @foundrystudio • Client: @tomdixonstudio

Known for eclectic and quirky homewares, Tom Dixon needed a catalogue that would make the most of the brand's incredible product imagery. Salmon newsprint adds warmth and complements Tom Dixon's sleek and sculptural designs. Newsprint is a "great way to communicate in a bold yet accessible way," says creative studio Foundry, who designed the newspaper.

"Print plays a huge role for any brand that wants to communicate with different types of people. Digital is a great way to get the conversation going, but there's nothing like the human interaction of a printed piece."

Foundry

Share your story

The Scribner Hollow Post is a newspaper from Scribner's Catskill Lodge, a former motor lodge turned modern mountain retreat in upstate New York. Published twice a year, it highlights local businesses and talent. "It's a more editorial approach to a city guide, the newspaper is a keepsake that speaks to the entire region," says designer Alison Matheny of BEST Studio.

"Newsprint is unexpected compared to a brochure or digital content that we are so used to consuming rapidly. It's nostalgic — something you spend time with and share. And that's exactly what we were trying to achieve with the Scribner Hollow Post."

— BEST Studio

Front page foodies

Coquetel Social: Ocoquetelsocial • Liberty London: Olibertylondon

↑ Historic department store Liberty London used salmon newsprint to share the launch of their Mini British Food Hall. Inside they shared recipes using their new line of gourmet products and interviews with the illustrators behind the playful packaging.

↑ Stockholm cocktail bar Coquetel Social uses a salmon tabloid for their drinks menu. The large format lets them go beyond ingredients and share the history behind classic cocktails — and show that they really know their stuff! With playful illustrations, it also doubles as a colourful, on-brand placemat.

Compare print quality and colours across each of our paper types.

LETTERS 65pt COULD

55pt

FILL IN 45pt

IF YOU USE A 35pt

SMALL POINT SIZE 25pt

ON TOP OF A 20pt

COLOURED BACKGROUND

SO USE A BOLD WEIGHT! 10pt

5pt

